Directions for Letter of Reference ISDSI Summer Program

Dear Colleague:

You have been asked to write a letter of reference for a student applying to a summer program at the International Sustainable Development Studies Institute (ISDSI) in Thailand. ISDSI courses academically demanding experiential, cross-cultural study abroad programs which focuses on the links between culture and ecology, and each course has its own specific focus and methods.

The summer program is a demanding course. The academic coursework is equivalent to an upper division undergraduate course, with the added challenge of doing this while living cross-culturally and often traveling in remote areas. Students are required to do experiential fieldwork while writing about and analyzing the specific topic under consideration. This program requires students to be active and engaged learners, independent, well organized, mature and good at working together in teams.

Please take a moment to look at our website (www.isdsi.org/summer) and write a letter giving us your candid assessment as to how you think this student will do on this sort of program. Please let us know your assessment of this student's strengths and weaknesses. We would especially appreciate knowing how this student works with others, deals with stressful and/or ambiguous situations, and their academic qualifications.

Would you want this student on a program you are leading in a developing country? Any other relevant information that you think important would be appreciated.

Please email the letter to admissions@isdsi.org.

Thank you for your assistance in this evaluation. I also write a lot of letters of recommendation and I know it takes time so I appreciate and value your input. Letters of recommendation are time consuming but very important, so thanks. If you want to email me directly, you can reach me at mritchie@isdsi.org.

Sincerely,

Mark A. Ritchie, Ph.D.
